[1994]

At the end of apartheid and prior to the holding of the first ever free and fair democratic elections in South Africa, as well as post-1994 election period, a series of meetings and conferences were held both in and out of South Africa to discuss the way forward. Some had to discuss among other issues, aid, trade, diplomatic ties, sanctions etc. these meetings and conferences acted as road maps to building and forging a new South Africa that would be economically, socially but above all diplomatically strong as far as international diplomacy was concerned.

C: INDEPENDENT ELECTORAL COMMISSION (IEC)

C1: IEC and election-related documents

[1994]

In 1994, the very first democratic elections were held in South Africa. Having now starting to forge new ties with the rest of the international community, South Africa needed the assistance of certain bodies to conduct not only free and fair but also transparent elections.

In this regard, South Africa received assistance as well as observer bodies and missions from the EU, and other foreign institutions and countries. This series holds records that deal with IEC and other issues related to elections.
