Abstract: THE CONSTITUTION HILL TRUST COLLECTION IS NO LONGER IN THE CUSTODY OF SAHA

Email enquiries@constitutionhilltrust.org for access to this collection

This collection traces the developmental history of the Constitution Hill complex as a heritage site and the Constitutional Court and consists of materials relating to the Johannesburg Fort, Number Four prison, the Women's Jail, and also includes prisoner narratives and materials donated by ex-prisoners, including Barbara Hogan, Esther Barsel, Joe Slovo, Fatima Meer and Lilian Keagile, and ex-warders, as well as organisational records. The collection contains paper-based materials, photographs, videos, museum phisota and a small library.

photographs, videos, museum objects and a small library.

Introduction

NO LONGER IN THE CUSTODY OF SAHA, THIS COLLECTION WAS RETURNED TO THE CONSTITUTION HILL TRUST WHEN SAHA RELOCATED TO THE UNIVERSITY OF THE WITWATERSRAND (WITS) IN 2021.

Email enquiries@constitutionhilltrust.org for access to this collection.

The custody of the archives of the Constitution Hill Trust was taken over by the South African History Archive (SAHA) when it moved from the to the Women's Jail Section at Constitution Hill in August 2012. The materials in this collection relate as much to the history of the site, as it does to the vision, development and construction of the Constitutional Court, and the conceptualisation and development of Constitutional Hill as a heritage site.

The seed for a new Constitutional Court building was planted in 1995 after many of the Constitutional Court judges at the time felt that the location of the Court in an office block in Braamfontein was not accessible enough. The search was soon commenced for an area that would be accessible and visible, that would aesthetically translate the court's mission of transparency and inclusiveness, and that would truly be embedded in a context of historical and symbolic importance. After a long process of searching for the perfect site, the judges settled on the notorious Old Fort prison, commissioned by Paul Kruger in 1893 to keep control over the uitlanders (foreigners) in the mining village of Johannesburg. The Fort was later used as a prison and from the beginning of its history white inmates were kept within the rampart walls, while black inmates were held outside. In 1902, Sections Four and Five, known colloquially as Number Four, were built to house black prisoners.

At the time that the Old Fort, declared a National Heritage Monument in 1965, was chosen as a prospective site for the court, it and the Number Four prison complex had fallen into extreme disrepair. Since the vacation of the Old Fort and Number Four in 1983, almost no upkeep had taken place. For many, the Old Fort's neglect was worrying and the introduction of the Constitutional Court to the site also became an opportunity to renovate and restore the crumbling complex to national monument status. Constitutional Court judge Albie Sachs described the choice of the site in 2003 as a sign of the "transformation of South Africa from a racist, authoritarian society to a constitutional democracy. A more South African centre of repression and hope could not have been found."

The Constitution Hill Collection located at SAHA's offices at the Women's Jail, contains documents, correspondence, publications, and photographs that trace the history of the making of Constitution Hill from the early 1980's. The collection spans the time from when it was first suggested to turn the entire site (including Number Four) into a heritage site, to the opening of the complex and the Constitutional Court.

The Making of Constitution Hill

The collection includes various documents that concern the making of Constitution Hill as we know it today, including a large collection of site photographs that show the transformation of the site from the beginning of construction in 2002 to the completion in 2004, as well as some site plans and presentation files that were used by the architects, construction companies and planners. Organisational documents like reports, minutes, tenders, business and funding proposals that trace the planning on various levels, from various teams and organisations can be found in the collection. This includes the organisational documents from various committees and state bodies that were either commissioned to implement various programmes, or that were solicited to help with the creation of the site. These teams and stakeholders include: Heritage, Education and Tourism team (HET), Department of Public Works, The Johannesburg Development Agency, the National Monuments Council, and the South African Heritage Resources Agency.

Historical Research

Research into the site's history and the early history of Johannesburg that was undertaken by the Heritage, Education and Tourism team (HET) in the form of articles, historic photographs and reports are also present in the collection. This research spans the use of the Fort from when it was constructed under the instruction of Paul Kruger, president of the Zuid-Afrikaanse Republiek in 1893, to its occupation by the British army during the South Africa War in 1900, to its use as a prison during Apartheid where political prisoners like Henry Nxumalo, Nelson Mandela, O.R Tambo, Barbara Hogan, Winnie Mandela, and Albertina Sisulu were held. The research was undertaken in order to conceptualise the key points of the site that could be included in a programme of permanent exhibitions, which can still be viewed on the site.

Prisoner Narratives

The HET team that was commissioned to coordinate and implement the museum exhibitions on display at the Fort and Number Four researched into the personal narratives of criminal and political male and female ex-prisoners held at Number Four and the Women's Jail. These ex-prisoners are lesser known, but their stories are important in understanding the processes of arrest and unfair trial during the apartheid era; the prison conditions of black inmates; and the relations to warders. This research takes the form of interview transcripts, video interviews, and ex-prisoner workshop transcripts. An extensive number of these documents relate to the Women's Jail. Some of the ex-female prisoners still meet on a weekly basis and SAHA is in the process of working with these women on updating and legitimising the collection.

Public Programmes

Planning for public programmes from 2004 – 2007 generated a large amount of accompanying material. This material includes photography, posters, brochures and invitations. Public programmes include exhibitions, festivals, educational tours and programmes, as well as the events that occurred during the public opening of various sections of the complex, such as the Women's Jail. Documents relating to the site's participation in the World Summit on Sustainable Development (WSSD) are also available.

Historical Papers and Works

The collection holds various historical documents. This includes correspondence by ex-prisoners of the Fort and the Women's Jail such as Barbara Hogan, Esther Barsel, and Eli Weinberg, Violet Weinberg and Sheila Weinberg. The Weinberg collection of correspondence span Eli, Violet and Sheila's incarceration; the house arrest of Sheila and Violet; Eli and Violet's exile in Tanzania; correspondence between Sheila and various Indian prisoners held on Robben Island; and letters from the state, most notably the Ministry of Justice and the Ministry of Internal Security, to Eli, Violet and Sheila. Fatima Meer's original drawings and paintings of everyday life in the Women's Jail are also kept in the archive.

Museum Objects

Museum objects that were commissioned and donated by various institutions and stakeholders can also be found in the collection. Items include warder uniforms, personal items donated by ex-prisoners, and soap, blanket and paper mache sculptures created by male ex-prisoners for exhibition purposes.

Notes

The Constitution Hill Archive Collection Policy of 2003 states that "the Constitution Hill collections will embody the vision of Constitution Hill" and that items collected will relate first and foremost to the history of the site, to the social history of the site, South African local history, and the development of the Constitutional Court and constitutional law". From 2003 to 2007 materials were actively collected, sourced, accessioned and stored in the archival storage space at Constitution Hill which is now being occupied by SAHA.

When SAHA took over the custody of the archive due to resource constraints, the archive had not been maintained or managed for over five years, and was in much need of work and attention. A comprehensive assessment was the first step to establish the extent and condition of archival materials and museum objects.

Embarking on the first phase

The archival team took seven months to complete the first phase of work on the archives of the Constitution Hill Trust (now known as the Constitution Hill collection). This included a comprehensive assessment; conducting background research; identifying problem areas and concerns; reviewing record-keeping systems; examining systems of accessioning; conducting audits of paper-based materials, photographs, special media materials and museum objects; identifying archival collection series; compiling basic listings for all archival collections; conducting a site search for materials removed from the archive and facilitating the return of such materials to the archive, and identifying preservation needs.

Agreements with stakeholders are currently being reviewed to support and enable the access and use of archival materials.

Materials have mostly been described on folder level. The collection inventory is a work-in-progress and archival description on item level will follow during the second phase of work on the Constitution Hill collection.

Arrangement

The archival arrangement of the Constitution Hill Trust collection aims to reflect the developmental history of the Constitutional Court and Constitution Hill from conceptualisation to the opening of the Constitutional Court, and the complex as a heritage site.

B05: Historical research

B05.1: Fort research

[2006]

Comprehensive research was conducted by Sharon Cort on the history of the Fort for the purpose of possible museum exhibitions. She compiled three files of reference and research materials marked 'Fort research files 2006 no. 1-3'.

B05.1.1: Fort research file no. 1

The wealth of reference and research materials in this file are divided into the following sections: BACKGROUND HERITAGE DOCUMENTS - which include various reports and submissions, e.g. Johannesburg Fort specifications, The Old Fort: proposals for the development of the buildings and land of the Fort site for a museum of racial tolerance and a centre of reconciliation (1996), the restoration of the Johannesburg Fort: a living museum of military and penal history (1992); EXHIBITION TEAM DOCUMENTS - which include the Constitution Hill Draft Interpretative Plan (2003), Part I: The Old Fort and its satellites 1893-1910 and Part II: A history of the elements of the Johannesburg Prison Complex 1910-1988, A concise history of the Old Fort and associated buildings from 1893 to the present, Constitution Hill Exhibition Walkthrough, Fort Report Database; Newspaper articles; Maps; General images of the Fort. The sections on EARLY JOHANNESBURG - THE BUILDINGS OF THE JAIL; THE JAMESON RAID; THE ANGLO-BOER WAR AND THE BRITISH OCCUPATION OF THE FORT contain numerous photocopies of documents and photographs sourced from other museums and/or archives.

B05.1.2: Fort research file no. 2

This file is marked CELL STORIES and contains reference and research materials on the following people: Thompson Bain, Colin Wade, Cornelis Broeksma and Tom Visser, the Foster Gang, and General Christiaan de Wet. Thompson Bain was incarcerated at the Fort in 1900 for siding with the Boers and in 1914 for his involvement in labour strikes. Colin Wade was incarcerated for his involvement in the 1913 Strike. Both Cornelis Broeksma and Tom Visser were arrested for sending coded message criticizing the British during the Anglo-Boer War. Broeksma was accused of treason and executed at the Fort. General Christiaan de Wet was imprisoned for his role in the 1914 Rebellion.

B05.1.3: Fort research file no. 3

This file is marked CELL STORIES (CONTINUED FROM FILE 2) and contains reference and research materials on the 1922 Miners' Strike; Ossewabrandwag; Joe Slovo; Others held in 1960 State of Emergency - Rev. Douglas, Ernie Wentzel, Cecil Williams and Rusty Bernstein; David Pratt, Cerdic Mayson, Barusch Hirson and Michelle Bruno, as well as memoirs of other prisoners.

B06: Exhibitions

C: Organisational materials

The organisational materials were not originally part of the Constitution Hill archives. These materials would have still been in use by the office of origin at the time the archive was being established. Stored in various storerooms around the Constitution Hill complex, a site audit was conducted and a large number of later office records are now part of the archive. These materials are not yet processed.

H01: Materials donated by ex-prisoners

H01.01: Esther Barsel papers

[1964-1968]

This collection of correspondence includes letters written by Esther Barsel to her husband Hymie Barsel and her daughters Merle and Linda during her incarceration in the Johannesburg Women's Jail (1984) and the Barberton Women's Jail (1985-1986).

H01.02: Barbara Hogan papers

[1997-1990]

Donated by Barbara Hogan in November 2003. Correspondence forms the bulk of this collection, complemented by prison records as well as documents that relate to her Masters thesis on unemployment.

H01.2.01: Documents relating to her arrest

H01.2.01.01: Report by Barbara Hogan on her ANC underground work

[Circa 1981]

This report, entitled 'Problems arising in internal political work' outlines Barbara Hogan's underground work for the ANC. The report and the so-called 'Close Comrades' list, which were intended for the ANC, were intercepted and lead to her arrest on 22 September 1981. Photocopy.

H01.2.01.02: 'Close Comrades' list

[Circa 1981]

The handwritten document entitled 'Close Comrades (as regards above and underground work)' by Barbara Hogan lists the names of people involved in above and underground work for the ANC. Photocopy.

H01.2.01.03: Documents presumably confiscated by the security police

[1981]

Each of the documents bears a signature and the date 22/9/81, the date of Barbara Hogan's arrest. This indicates that the documents could have been confiscated from Barbara Hogan by the security police. The documents have been numbered in red pen and include numbers 1, 9, 13, 16, 25-29, 31, 34 and 39-40. It would seem that most of these documents relate to Barbara Hogan's research for her MA thesis on unemployment in South Africa and include articles and numerous handwritten notes by Barbara Hogan.
