Introduction

The Constitution and Civil Society Project collection documents a multi-faceted research and archival project conducted by the South African History Archive (SAHA) since 2014 with the primary aim to explore the changing relationship between civil society and the South African Constitution as we approach the 20th anniversary of the formal adoption of the Constitution in 1996.

The collection to date consists of thirty-three interviews (audio-recordings and transcripts) conducted by Dale McKinley with leaders of a range of civil society organisations as well as individual activists, academics and lawyers. The interviews cover the three main sectors of civil society – legal/litigation; NGO/academic, and community/union/activist. Interviewees for this project include: Alfani Yoyo (Consortium for Refugees and Migrants South Africa), Alison Tilley (Open Democracy Advice Centre), Booby Peek (Groundwork), Bonita Meyersfeld (Centre for Applied Legal Studies - University of the Witwatersrand), Cherith Sanger (Sex Workers Education and Advocacy Task Force), David Fig (BioWatch), Dustin Kramer (Social Justice Coalition), Elroy Paulus and Lynette Maart (Black Sash), Gareth Newham (Institute for Security Studies), Geoff Budlender (Human Rights Advocate/ legal Resources Centre), Jaap de Visser (Community Law Centre - University of the Western Cape), Jackie Dugard (Human Rights activist/legal scholar/Socio-Economic Rights Institute), Jacob van Garderen and David Cote (Lawyers for Human Rights), Jane Duncan (ex-Director of Freedom of Expression Institute; University of Johannesburg Department of Media/Communications), Janet Love (Legal Resources Centre), John Appolis (veteran unionist and political activist), John Clarke (Opposition to Urban Tolling Alliance), Judith February (ex-IDASA; Institute for Security Studies), Kate Tissington (Socio-Economic Rights Institute), Mark Heywood (Section 27), Mashao Chauke (Schubart Park Residents Association), Melissa Fourie (Centre for Environmental Rights), Nathan Geffen (ex-TAC leader; editor of GroundUp), Nicole Fritz (Southern Africa Litigation Centre), Nthuthuzo Ndzomo and Bayanda Mazwi (Equal Education), Patrick Bond (Centre for Civil Society – University of KwaZulu-Natal), Prakashnee Govender (COSATU Parliamentary Office), Richard Callan (University of Cape Town Law School), Roger Ronnie (ex-General Secretary of SAMWU/unionist and activist), S'bu Zikode (Abahlali base Mjondolo), Samantha Hargreaves (ex-Landless People's Movement/Women's Rights activist), Sandra Liebenberg (University of Stellenbosch Law School) and Simon Delaney (Human Rights lawyer - independent).

Complementing the interviews is a collection of research materials on crucial constitutional rights cases that have come before the Constitutional Court as well as academic, legal and activist materials written over the past two decades on civil society's interpretation of and interactions with the constitution.

AL3297 - The Constitution and Civil Society Project Collection

The issues explored during the research phase of this project include:

- The impact of the constitution on the work of civil society;
- The changing attitudes of civil society towards, and levels of trust in, the constitution;
- The extent to which the constitution is accessible to civil society as a tool for transformation.

These oral history and research materials as well as the project report "Riding the Transitional Rollercoaster – the shifting relationship between civil society and the Constitution in-post apartheid South Africa" by Dale McKinley form part of a broader SAHA project collection on the Constitution.

The Constitution and Civil Society Project collection also builds on the materials contained in the Constitution Hill Trust collection (AL3295). The latter comprise a wealth of materials that speak not only to the history of the site, but also the process by which heritage sites are conceptualised and developed, and the vision and development of the constitutional court within the site. It is a combination of historical archive (donated materials related to the history of the site, going back over a century) and institutional archive (materials generated by Constitution Hill Trust relating to activities of the site, and of the Constitutional Court). Materials have been donated by ex-prisoners and their families (such as drawings done by Fatima Meer while imprisoned), as well as ex-wardens and staff (such as handcuffs, batons, uniforms, etc.).

Arrangement

The oral history component forms series A of the collection. Interviews have been arranged in alphabetical order by interviewee surname within each region: A1 - Cape Town, A2 - Durban, A3 - Gauteng.

Research materials form series B and project documentation series C of the collection.

Notes

The oral history and research component form part of the broader project collection on the Constitution.

Dale McKinley conducted the thirty-three oral history interviews in 2014 in three regions - Cape Town (12 interviews), Durban (3 interviews) and Gauteng (18 interviews). He submitted the audio-recordings (MP3 format) to SAHA by region and this order has been retained for the purpose of archival arrangement. The transcripts, transcribed by Victoria Hume, are accessible online. Consent were obtained from interviewees to make their interview materials publically available.

A collection of related research materials on crucial constitutional rights cases as well as academic, legal and activist materials written over the past two decades submitted by Dale McKinley in electronic format is also part of this collection.
